Supreme Court Hears Janus vs. AFSCME Monday

The U.S. Supreme Court is hearing Janus vs. AFSCME Monday. This is a case that could impose “right-to-work” on the entire public sector – the culmination of decades of attacks on working people by corporate CEOs, the wealthiest 1% and the politicians that do their bidding to rig the economy in their favor.

Twice in the last three years, the U.S. Supreme Court has been asked – and declined – to answer the fundamental question of whether the fair share fees that support strong public sector collective bargaining are constitutional.

In the 2014 Harris v. Quinn case, the Court sidestepped the question and in 2016’s Friedrichs v. California Teachers Association (CTA) case, the then eight Justice court deadlocked on the question leaving it unanswered.

Monday, the Supreme Court will take the Janus v. AFSCME case to answer the question once and for all. Specifically, the Court will decide this term if Abood v. Detroit Board of Education, the 1977 case that established the foundational precedent for fair share fees, should be overruled.

The Decision is expected sometime this spring. The Supreme Court determines when to announce its decisions.
